

THE FOURTEENTH ANNUAL Wharton Leadership Conference

Leading in a Recovering (and Even Rebounding) Economy

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE OVERVIEW

As organizations begin to recover from the financial crisis of 2008-10, many of their leaders are guardedly but determinedly moving to restore their growth and re-embark on expansion. In doing so, it is helpful to reflect on what we have learned from leading through the crisis and about the organizational and individual acts of leadership that should have been taken to avert or manage the crisis. It is also essential to look ahead to the different kinds of leadership that will now be required for a world that wants to mend. The fourteenth annual Wharton Leadership Conference in Philadelphia on June 16, 2010 focuses on leading in this post-crisis era of recovery and rebuilding.
